

TEDDY, JR., JOINS THE PRESIDENT

Accompanied to Pine Knoll by Surgeon-General Rixey.

DRIVE FROM DEPOT IN POURING RAIN

Telephone to Plain Dealing Still Suffers From Affects of Sleet and No Communication Can Be Had By the President With His Men.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., December 28.—The presidential party at "Pine Knoll" was further augmented this afternoon by the arrival of Theodore, Jr., who was accompanied by Surgeon-General Presley M. Rixey. The two came down from the capital on the Washington and Florida limited, which reaches North Garden at 2:43, a half hour behind schedule.

The newcomers brought with them two crates of dogs. The large crate contained three splendid looking beagle hounds, and the other two beautiful white setters, which were greatly admired by a number of fox hunters, who were at the station awaiting a train for Charlottesville.

After a brief stop at North Garden Dr. Rixey and the President's namesake, with gun in hand, stepped into the two-seated dog, which conveyed the President, Mrs. Roosevelt and Miss Ethel to "Pine Knoll" yesterday, and in a jiffy had turned into the Albemarle road, closely followed by the spring wagon containing the dogs.

Soon after their departure a drizzling rain began to fall, and by 5 o'clock had resolved itself into a downpour, which must have drenched the travelers before they reached their destination.

Communication Cut Off. Stenographer Latta and James Sloan, the President's secret service guard, who are stopping at a hotel in this city, have not heard a single word from the President since they parted with him at North Garden at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. In fact, it was the President's idea to divorce himself entirely from work of any sort, and when he had Mr. Latta good-bye yesterday, he did not anticipate receiving his service until the start was made on the return trip to the White House Sunday.

There is hardly any doubt but that the President and his sons enjoyed a good hunt this morning, for one of the colored drivers who went with the party, "Pine Knoll" yesterday says that a pack of hounds from the "Plain Dealing" kennels were awaiting the arrival of the party.

Entirely Informal. When asked if any one was on hand to welcome the President yesterday afternoon, the same informant replied, "No, but Uncle Dick and two colored women."

The telephone line to Plain Dealing is still suffering from the effects of the big sleet of ten days ago, and all efforts to secure any information whatever from that source have been to no avail. A newspaper correspondent, who spent the day at North Garden in the hope of getting some little scraps of news from the President, met with complete disappointment, as no messenger came from "Pine Knoll." The two negro drivers who took out the newcomers this afternoon were delayed by the storm and had not returned up to 8 o'clock tonight. The phone from North Garden to Plain Dealing is also out of working order.

A Fox Hunt. Had the President been at North Garden at noon today, he no doubt would have participated in an old Virginia fox hunt and would have enjoyed the sport keenly. A red fox was liberated near the station, and for over an hour gave the two dozen followers of the hounds a merry chase along the base of Potomac Mountain, in full view of the depot. About two miles from the station the fox was freed, but was knocked down and started again. Completely fagged out, he was run down by William Durrant's "Boxer" on the edge of a side of cinders, where he had hesitated to get a view of his pursuers. Four packs of hounds were in the chase.

While going through a field near the finish line of Mr. Sutherland's best hounds was killed by a vicious bull.

LIVE IN THE LODGE.

A Second House, Well Furnished, Will Accommodate Guests.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) SCOTTSVILLE, Va., December 28.—The arrival at Springfield yesterday afternoon of President and Mrs. Roosevelt and party was heralded by a smiling darkey, bearing a huge brown turkey through the portals of "Pine Knoll" for "Mr. President's dinner."

Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt will sit "neath their own vine and tree" if running cinders and plies may be made to do duty for these things at their own little shooting lodge, while the gentlemanly accompanying them will be snugly housed at the eight-room cottage of a few hundred yards away.

The latter house has been neatly and comfortably furnished recently from attic to cellar. Shades at the windows, wood heaters, oiled and painted furniture help to make their second home cozy for the occupants. It is said that the big cooking stove which was put up in this building for the hunters has been carried over to the lodge, and so with all the picturesque of the wide-mouthed fireplaces

On one day this week the number of Republicans from the South at the White House was so great the fact was commented on. They all came looking for office. The President appears to have come to the conclusion reached by Southern people generally years ago, that there is no real Republican party in the South, and that the hope of office is all that keeps up a semblance of organization.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) JUDASVILLE, Va., December 28.—D. W. His death resulted from the bursting of a blood vessel in the neighborhood of the heart.
